Khartoum meeting to study Red Sea report

JEDDAH, Jan. 5 (SPA) - Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources Sheikh Abmed Zaki Yamani will preside over the annual meeting of the Saudi-Sudanese Commission for the Development of Red Sea Resources in Khartoum next Thursday. According to the commission's secretary general, Dr. Zaki Mostafa, the meeting will discuss reports on next year's budget of the commission, details of its five-year plan and bis report on the commission's activities during the preceding year.

In addition the meeting will consider determination of contracts for the commission's technical advisers and other topics related to its future activities.

During the meeting, the Saudi delegation will be Sheikh Gbazi Sultan, petroleum undersecretary for mining affairs and Dr. Zuhair Nuwab, assistant secretary general of the commission.

The Sudanese representatives will be led by Dr. Sherif Al-Tohami, minister of energy and mining, with Dr. Mustafa and Yonssuf Sulaiman, director general of the Department of Geology, as members, During the past few months, the commission has successfully undertaken experimental work in the Red Sea, and the data obtained through these experiments is being analyzed now.

With almost conclusive evidence that commercially exploitable minerals are lying on the floor of the Red Sea, the commission is examining the possibility of cooperation with industries to be established at the industrial complex in Yanbu.

Lebanon warns of hostilities in Middle East

BEIRUT, Jan. 5 (Rt - Lebanese President Elias Sarkis said Saturday the Middle East lived on the edge of a volcano, "with talk of war on every tongue."

. In a New Year's address to the diplomarie corps, the Lebanese president painted a sombre picture of the situation in the Middle East in general and Lebanon in particular.

"Over long years, crises have followed each other in our orient without our finding successful solutions," Sarkis told foreign envoys at his palace in the eastern suburb of Baabdat: "Pending issues have accumulated and it is no wonder that talk of war should be on every tongue..."

He sharply criticized the dispatch to Lebanon of an Iranian volunteer force now being raised by Hojarolislam Muhammad Montazeri, son of one of Iran's most respected religious leaders. Hojatolislam Montazeri emered Lebanon illegally last week for a brief visit during which he told reporters he would send thousands upon thousands of volunteers to South Lebanon to join Palesnnian commandos in their fight against Israel. Despite the Lebanese government's hostility to the plan, about 20 Iranian volunteers have arrived in Lebanon's South burdering on Israel: Almost 300 Iranians have made their way to Syria where they are now being trained at a camp of Fatah, the biggest Palestinian commando group.

"There looms before us today the specter of a very grave adventure, namely the determination to send volunteers from Iran to South Lebanon." Sarkis declared.

"The mere determination to undertake such action is a violation of the elementary principles governing international relations. "It implies disregard of the Lebanese state's right to sovereignty...on Lebanese ter-AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT Feasibility Studies Planning & Installation for:

Soviets decline arms talks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (AP) - The Soviet Union has withdrawn an offer to negotiate limits on its modern nuclear arsenal in Europe and a counter version planned by NATO, the State Department says.

"The Russianshave responded negatively to the (NATO) alliance's negotiating offer and are continuing their efforts to distort and to reverse the alliance's modernization decision," Department officials said in a statement released Friday.
The statement said," The alliance negotiating offer is a serious one and remains on the table." But it added that NATO " remains committed to implementation" of its December decision to deploy 572 new Affeitean made nuclear missiles in Europe.

Shortly after announcing the nuclear modernization, NATO asked the Soviets and their allies to take part in arms limitation talks which Secretary of State Cyrus Vance called "the most comprehensive that have ever been proposed."

Friday's announcement was the first word that the Soviets had formally rejected the invitation, but Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had left little doubt in a late-December speech.

The Soviet news agency lass quoted Gromyko as saying. If some people still seriously bope to talk with the Soviet Union from positions of strength, they would be well-advised to give up these vain hopes. We will never agree to it and will not allow anybody to speak this language with our coun-

Soviet leaders had said earlier that they wanted arms talks with NATO but only on condition that the alliance did not go forward with plans for the new American missiles. NATO officials called that Soviet offer a hollow one, arguing that the Russians were hoping to halt deployment of new NATO weapons only after completing a big modernization and expansion program themselves. The SALT is another U.S.-Soviet arms agreement which is banging in the balance. Friday, the United States pledged to live up to the treaty with the Soviet Union as long as the Russians do not violate the terms.

With the promise came a warning to Moscow that violations could prompt the United States to resume weapons programs banned by the SALI II treaty.

Assad boasts of Syria's strength

DAMASCUS, Jan. 5 (R) - President Hafez Assad has said that no power on earth could make Syria deviate from its principles.

He was addressing the seventh Congress of the Ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party Friday at the end of two weeks of deliberations.

The meeting adopted several recommendations designed to check corruption and map out Syria's policy for the coming four

The recommendations are expected to be disclosed at a public plenary session Sunday. "Syria is strong, thanks to its army and people, and is always capable of resisting American imperialist designs and Israel and its agents," President Assad said in his speech. "There is no power on earth which can deviate it from its principles or succeed in bargaining with it over its cause," he added. Assad said Syria's enemies should not be allowed to undermine the country's achieve-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (AP) - President Jimmy Carter, retaliating Friday night for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, announced a complete balt on shipments of U.S. bigh technology to the Soviet Union and a partial embargo on American grain sales.

"History teaches perhaps few clear lessons," Carter said in a nanonally broadcast

"But surely one such lesson learned by the world at great cost is that aggression unopposed becomes a contagious disease."

Carter, however, refused to call for a boycott of the 1980 summer Olympic Games in Moscow, an option that had been widely discussed in recent days. However, he threatened such a boycott, saying, "continued aggressive actions will endanger both the participation of athletes and the travel to Moscow by spectators who would normally wish to attend the Olympic in American waters will be severely curtailed. - The United States will supply military equipment, food and other assistance to Pakistan, a neighbor of Afghanistan to which some 400,000 Afghan refugees have fled.

"The response of the international community to the Soviet attempt to crush Afghanistan must match the gravity of the Soviet action," Carter said.

He declared that Soviet dominance of Afghanistan could eventually threaten the security of the West. "A Soviet-occupied Afghanistan threatens both Iran and Pakistan, and is a stepping stone to their possible control over much of the world's oil supplies," Carter said. Historically, the Soviets have sought access to the Arabian Sea and Indian Ocean. In their path stand Iran and Pakistan. The area is of special strategie importance to the West because more than 60 per cent of its oil is shipped through the Straits of Hormuz, between Iran and the Arabian Penin-The cutback in grain shipments was calcu-

One million march toward U.S. embassy

FEHRAN, Jan. 5 (Agencies) - More than a million persons demonstrated Saturday around the U.S. Embassy where 49 hostages are being held by Iranian students. At the same time, the students demanded that Foreign Minister Sadeq Gotbzadeb hand over the American charge d'affaires for questioning.

The demonstration came the day after U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim ended a four-day mission that failed to gain release of the American hostages beld in the embassy since Nov. 4.

The crowd, which was as large as the throng which gathered outside the embassy on the holy day of Ashura in November, shouted their support of revolutionary leader Ayatollah Rubollah Khomeini and bis demand for the return of the ousted Sbah. They also condemned disturbances caused Friday in the religious city of Qom by supporters of the nation's second most popular religious leader, Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari.

The U.S. charge d'affaires, Bruce Laingen, has been kept at the foreign ministry since the seizure of the embassy. He went there for protection after the students stormed the building.

Yesterday the students called on Gotbzadeh to surrender Laingen to them for questioning about " espionage documents" they had discovered at the embassy.

" Responsibility for transferring him to the nest of spies (the embassy) is on the foreign minister," they said in a statement. There was no immediate reaction from Gotbzadeb or foreign ministry officials.

The students, who have said they will put all the hostages on trial unless the deposed Shah is extradited from Panama, also said yesterday they would invite a Victnamese delegation to attend the trial of one of them.

David M. Roeder. They said Roeder was a former U.S. Force pilot who had flown more than 100 bombing misslons during the Vietnam war.

be said he would not allow the remaining 17 million tons to be dumped on the market and depress domestic prices. He said American farmers will not lose money by his action. But it does raise questions about the long term benefits farmers had been expecting from Soviet grain sales. The grain halt amounts to about 22 per cent of the U.S. grain export market.

White House officials, briefing reporters before the speech, said the limitation on fishing would deprive the Soviets of about 350,000 tons in 1980.

OFFLOADING SUPPLIES: Two Soviet military cargo aircraft unload military supplies on the taxiway of Kabul airport. Russian supplies continue to pour into Afghanistan since the military coup on Dec. 27.

Russians raid rebels ISLAMABAD, Jan. 5 (AP) - Motorized

Russian army units backed by air strikes have continued to pound rebel strongholds, ogbtening the Soviet hold over Afghanistan. Western diplomatic sources said Saturday.

A West European diplomat quoted reliable informants in Kabul as saying the Soviet military presences tood at about "5,000 while other diplomatic sources said it could be as high as 100,000 and climbing.

The Pakistani newspaper. Jung reported 700 Afghan insurgents were killed in the remote North Eastern province of Badakhshan, strategically bordering the Soviet Union, China and Pakistan. In a dispatch from Chitral about 60 kilometers south of Badakhshan, it said Soviet casualties also were high and that a rebel siege on the Isbkasham military post was holding despite air arracks. Diplomatic sources here were unable to confirm the report but armed resistance against the Soviet invasion was believed taking place in Badakhshan, Pakria, Parwan, Kanoahar and Hecat provinces, Soviet arms and military personnel are still being sent into Afghanistan, nine days after Russian troops replaced president Hafizullab Amin, later reported executed, with Babrak Karmal in a precision 3 1/2 hour coup. "The troops may not be coming by aircraft any more but they certainly are coming.

said one source, quonng diplomatic messages from Kabul, which he described as quiet. Like other diplomats interviewed, he asked to remain anonymous. One of the two main routes runs from Termez in the Soviet Tajuk Republic border through the Salang Pass to Kabul. From there troops were being rushed to Badakbshan by way of Takhar Province.

The big question in diplomatic circles was whether Soviet troops would receive sufficient support from the Afghan army which has bad little or no share of fighting since the Dec. 27 coup. Many units have been disarmed and confined to barracks while whole companies bave deffected in some cases.

Miteb urges preserving Islamic building design

DAMMAM, Jan, 5 (SPA) - Prince Miteb Saturday called for preservation of the Islamic style of architecture in Saudi Arabia in buildings, mosques and all other struc-

The prince, who is the minister of public works and housing and acting minister of municipal and rural affairs, was addressing the opening ceremony of the International Seminar on Islamic Architecture and Planning in Dammam.

He thanked King Faisal University in Dammam and all those others who organized the seminar. He also hoped all ministries and government departments would join hands in preserving their country's traditional Islamic architectural character.

He said that an optimistic sign was that the outside world had begun to copy Islamic architectural designs, owing to its artistic value and its beauty. He added that such an art should be reflected throughout Saudi Arabia's urbanization.

The opening session of the five-day seminar was attended by Governor of the Eastern Province Prince Abdul Mohsen ibn Jiluwi and by Minister of Higher Education Sheikh Hassan ibn Abdullah Al Al-Sheikh.

The seminar is organized by King Faisal University here, in collaboration with the Ministries of Public Works and Housing, Planning, Municipal and Rural Affairs, and Pilgrimage and Endowments. It began with recitation from the Holy Koran, followed by a speech by Dr. Muhammad Turki Al-Turki, the dean of the university and head of the higher committee.

Sheikh Hassan, who is also the chancellor of Saudi Arabian universities, said that Islam was not only a religion of worship but a way of life and a path always leading us towards scientific progress in all spheres, particularly architecture.

He said that all Muslims had to safeguard their traditional designs inherited from previous geoerations.

The rector, Dr. Muhammad Said Al-Qahtani called for research to revive the glorious past and set fixed principles from the Muslim heritage, rather than to copy blindly from others.

The dean of the Faculty of Architecture and Planning, Dr. Ahmad Farid, said that the seminar aimed at reviewing and gathering experts and scientists coocerned with Islamic structures to define Islamic architecture and the principles of planning and set up a permanent body to collect data on the issue.

"After the ceremony, Prince Mileb opened an exhibition at the same faculty and inspected models of Islamic architecture and town planning.

The Ministries organizing the seminar, as well as the Ministry of Defense and Aviation, and other institutions concerned with architecture and planning are taking part in the exhibition.

· Charii, who cut short a lour of Muslim countries to return to Jeddah because of the Afghan situation, said the Soviet military presence has aroused the resentment of the Islamic world. It ran contrary to all international conventions.

"The attack," he said "will have serious consequences for Islamic countries." The organization, which respects the internal affairs of all states and especailly those of member states, feels it is bound to defend the principles of freedom and independence.

"Hence," he added, the organization cannot stand idly by in the face of such flagrant Soviet intervention in the affairs of an Islamic

Since Dr. Agroosb is talking about one sector only, I may have nothing against his proposal. But if we look at other sectors we would find it disgraceful to bave to hire foreign companies to ruo them. We bave our character and traditions to preserve and these companies are usually a lead of east and west. They may engulf us in their own customs. There are already more foreign companies than projects, with the result that more than one company is involved in carrying out a single project. That means that we could do without many foreign companies.

Iran volunteers seen in S.Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon, Jan. 5 (Agencies) -Iranian volunteers were seen in southern Lebanon for the first time Friday and Israeli-backed rightist militias of renegade Lebanese army Maj. Saad Haddad iffreatened to shell the port city of Tyre.

Eyewitnesses said they saw about 20 Iranians in the company of Palestinian commandos in the southern city of Sidon, but they were unarmed.

Haddad's warning was broadcast Friday over his private radio station, which calls itself "voice hope." Many families packed and left Tyre, 12 miles north of the Israeli frontier, shortly after the broadcast.

Haddad's station claimed that the Iranians crossed the border from Syria and headed to Tyre with the help of commandos from Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. The PLO in Beirut withheld comment.

An estimated 200 Iranians arrived in Damascus last month with the aim of joining the Palestinians and their Lebanese leftist allies in the turbulent border region near Israel.

Hojatoleslam Mubammad Montazeri, described as the Iranians' "guide," told a press conference in Beirut this week that thousands more volunteers would be sent to Lebanon.

The Lebanese government firmly opposes the entry of the volunteers and bas sought Syman support to keep them out.

Later, the PLO said its forces repulsed an attempt by Haddad's forces to advance toward commando held territory in the central mountainous sector of South Lebanon.

A PLO statement said commando gunners opened fire on Haddad's advancing forces before reaching the strategic Khardali bridge. 10 miles north of Israel, and "forced them to withdraw southward."

"The enemy retaliated by shelling the town of Nabatiyeh and surrounding hamlets," the statement added without reporting any casualties.

Settlement policy hindering peace, Egypt reiterates

CAIRO, Jan. 5 (AP) - Three days before an Egyptian-Israeli summit a high ranking Egyptian official has repeated his government's condemnation of Israel's settlement policy, calling it an obstacle to comprehensive peace.

"Israel's declaration of its intentions to establish more settlements on occupied territories is in contradiction to our peace agreements, and the general principles that regulate the relations between Egypt and Israel," said Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Boutros Gahli.

In an interview with Cairo radio Friday Ghali said Egypt was struggling for a comprehensive peace, and settlements were just another stumbling block.

He added that the normalization of relations between Egypt and Israel which is Scheduled to begin later this month is a means and not an end in itself, toward achieving peace in the area.

"Normalization is connected to a final Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territories, and a settlement in all Arab lands." He claimed that the Arabs were condemning Egypt's peace efforts with Israel as a sell-out of the Palestinian cause, but they were wrong. "Egypt will continue its negotiations to help the Palestinians achieve self determination, and then the Arabs will know they were wrong," Ghali said.

Attacks at polls halt India vote count

NEW DELHI, Jan. 5 (Agencies) — India's election commission has ordered the post-ponement of ballot counting in caretaker Prime Minister Charan Singh's parliamentary constituency in northern India following reports of attacks on polling officials and other harassment.

Meanwhile, the death toll in electionrelated violence rose to 13 on Friday with the deaths of two persons in police firing in Madurai, southern India.

The United News of India reported that police fired live ammunition into a stone-throwing mob at Madurai after Marxist communists and followers of former Prime Minis-

He said no injuries were reported in the incident, which occurred during Thursday's balloting in India's nanonal election.

Counting was to begin Sunday in Baghpat but the election commission's decision means the votes will not be counted until a later. date, possibly Monday. The decision came after the Statesman newspaper published a report from Baghpat saying that untouchables, members of the lowest Indian Hindu caste, were prevented from voting by higher caste Hindus in Fatha village.

The Congress Party of Mrs. Gandhi alleged that Harijans had been prevented from voting in more than 100 villages in Singh's constituency.

The rural constituency, which has an electorate of 670,000, was one of 244 to vote in the first stage of India's general election. Others will vote on Sunday.

Carter okays F-X jet, changes arms policy

WASHING FON, Jan. 5 (Agencies) — The Carter administration, reversing a fundamental tenet of its arms control policy, bas said it will allow the development for export of a new model American fighter jet.

published this spring.
The book, Errol Flyan: The Untold Story, by Charles Higham, a highly-respected biographer of Hollywood notables, was based on mote than 5,000 documents obtained through the U.S. government's Freedom of Information Act.

Higham said the once-secret documents revealed that Flynn was under official surveillance during the war and proved that the swashbuckling star "was an agent of the Gestapo." He said that Flynn worked as "a subagent" or aide to a major German spy stationed in the United States.

To help the Fascists during the war, Flynn did important work in "aiding and abetting the enemy and in providing the enemy with naval intelligence," the author said in an

In the new jet, the "F-X" is now only a drawing board concept, which American aircraft companies will have to design and build. The administration expects the plane's capabilities to fall between two current models the F-5E and the F-16.

The F-5 was first developed in 1964 and has undergone five modifications. It was developed solely for export to other countries and is not used by the U.S. Air Force. It has a combat range of about 225 miles, which limits it chiefly to defensive missions, and its

Brazil, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Nanonalist
China, Switzerland, Kenya, the Philippines,
Sonth Korea and North Yemen.

But the F-5s those countries have are wearing out and in some cases becoming obsolete. South Korea's F-5s, for example, were capable of defeating North Korea's MiG 17s and MiG 19s, supplied by the Soviets. But now the Soviets are beginning to give North Korea a better plane, the MiG 21.

Officials said the administration decided it wanted a new plane to forestall two unfavorable prospects for the 1980s, as countries with F-5E's begin to replace them.

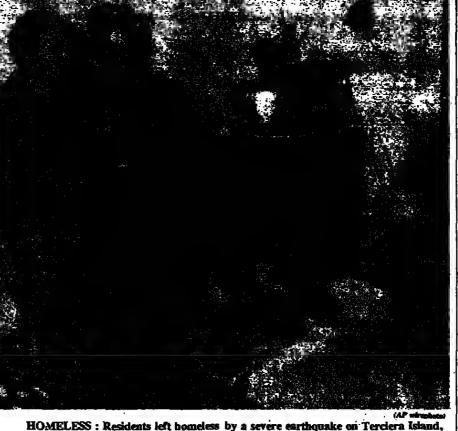

One is that the countries would demand the F-16, which has more range and payload than the United States wants to introduce in many parts of the world.

Another is that they would turn to European suppliers, such as France, which manufactures a sophisticated rival jet for export, the Mirage 2000.

Officials said the decision to authorize a new export jet followed a year of studies within the administration. The decision gained "broad support" from the Pentagon and the State Department, officials said.

In May 1977, President Carter announced a new policy on arms sales. A major part of that policy was a probibition on developing new weapons solely for export.

Officials said all American aircraft designers at efree to try to develop the new plane, at their own financial risk. I'wo companies which have expressed interest are the Northrop Corp. which manufactures the F-5E, and General Dynnmics, which manufactures the F-16.

'Major gunrunner'

Poisoned Amin foes, man says

NEW YORK, Jan. 5 (AP) — A "major international gunrunner" boasted to undercover investigators that he poisoned Ugandans, blew up a diplomat's limousine and planted a bomb in a Middle East hotel, a prosecutor has said.

Assistant District Attorney Matthew Crosson said Friday in Manhattan Supreme Court that Frank Terpil, 40, admitted be helped Idi Amin, the former Ugandan president, murder his rivals, Crosson said Terpil boasted that he tested strychnine, a powerful poison, on Amin's foes. Terpid also bragged about having a variety of poisons "that could kill human beings in from three seconds to three days," the prosecutor said.

The new information came to light at a bail bearing for Terpil and his co-defendant, George Korkala, 38.

Clock ticks nearer to doom

CHICAGO, Jan. 5 (AP) — The volatile international scene — dominated by political upheaval, energy problems and terrorism — has prompted a science journal to move its symbolic "doomsday clock" two minutes closer to nuclear war.

The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists cited various factors, including the failure of the SALI I treaty to curb the arms race and turmoil in countries such as Iran, when it moved the minute band on its clock from nine minutes to seven minutes before midnight in its current issue.

The step signifies the world is moving closer toward nuclear war, said Susan Cullen, the magazine's managing editor. She said Friday this is the first time the clock has been moved in six years.

Italy, Brazil still undecided over soccer champions' cup

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay, Jan. 5 | R)

— Italy and Brazil are apparently still undecided on whether they would take part in the Gold Cup for world soccer champions due to be staged in Uruguay late this year to mark the 50th anniversary of the first World Cup.

At a meeting of the six-nation organizing committee here Friday night Italy objected to a decision adopted by the other five which would have the tournament divided into two groups with the winner of one playing the runnerup of the other in the finals.

Italian delegate Artemio Franchi said this would allow a non-winner of a group to win the Cup and would also extend the tourna-

Carter threatens Olympics Games boycott has no direct say over Olympic participation.

WASHING FON. Jan. 5 (AP) - President Carter, retaliating Friday night for the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, said the Kremlip's move threatens the 1980 summer Olympics in Moscow.

But Carrer refused to call for a boycott of the Games, an option that has been widely discussed recently.

However, he threatened a boycott, saying, " continued aggressive actions will endanger both the participation of athletes and the travel to Moscow by spectators who would normally wish to attend the Olympic Games.

Carter said the United States would preefer not to see American achletes withdraw from the Games.

There was no immediate reaction from Olympie Officials but the question of a boycott was discussed earlier this week at an emergency meeting of NATO.

"I have always felt that at times administrators, and even the IOC, forget that athletes come first, and in no way should be prevented from competing... by political, racial orreligious discrimination, said Lord Killa-nin, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Sir Denis Follows, chairman of the British Olympic Association, said " it is not for gnvernments to meddle in matters of this kind .. Sports should be above politics."

And John Thomas, former U.S. high jumper, added: " Athletics and politics don't mix. They never have, and they never will. Pbil Ford and Otis Birdsong combined for 40 points to lead the Kansas City victory. The tnumph moved the Kings into first place in the Midwest Oivision, one-half game in front of idle Milwaukee.

Elvin Hayes scored eight of Washington's last 12 points in the final period to lead the Bullets over Golden State. Hayes, with 19 points for the game, was one of six Bullets in dnuble figures, just behind Bobby Dan-dridge, who led with 20.

Five other Sonics hit double figures as Seattle rauted Detroit.

The loss was Detroit's third in a row and seventh straight on the road. The Sonies are percentage points in front of the Los Angelesr Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Calvin Natt scored 27 points, including two free throws with eight seconds remaining, to clinch New Jersey's victory over Houston. Houston, which has now lost nine of its last 11 games, enjoyed 39-point performance by Moses Malone. The Nets wnn for the fourth time in their last five games. Lions tour seems likely

LONDON, Jan. 5 (R) - A decision to send a British Lions team to South Africa later this year became even more likely Friday when the English Rugby Union (ERU) decided here to back the controversial tour.

The three other British Isles unions, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, are expected to confirm their support for the tour, scheduled to start in May, when the committee of the four home Unions meet to make a final decision due Saturday.

Extensive repercussinns can be expected if the tour is approved, with this year's Moscow Olympics possibly affected.

Only last inputh, African nations decided tn press for Britain's exclusion from the Games if the Lions toured South Africa. Bob Weighill, secretary of the ERU, said in a statement Friday: "the Rugby Football Union Committee at a meeting in London today decided to support the British Isles rugby uninn tour to South Africa in 1980." This decision was taken after full debate and careful consideration of all implications, including the reading of a letter from Mr. Hectar Monro (the British sports minister) once again stated the government's view."

The British government view he referred to is that the tour —should not take place. The decision was immediately attacked by several British sports officials, including British Olympic Association Chairman Sir Denis Fellows. He said: "Every effort will now be made to hinder and aggravate nur participanon in the Moscow Olympics." He did not think African nations would successfully get Britain barrred from the games." The British Olympic Committee have adhered to the 1977 Gleneagles Agreement banning sporting contacts with South Africa," he said, Dickie Jeeps, chairman of the British Sports Council, which is sending a fact-finding mission to South Africa later this month, said he expected the decision but it did not mean the four bome unions will automatically sanction the tour, The Liberal Guardian newspaper warned

Saturday that "major political and sporting rows seem inevitable because of the rugby unions' refusal to call off the planned tour. Fellows said the rugby unions' support for the tour "is the death knell for the Commonwealth Games. "The black countries carry great voting strength in the Commonwealth and I have 'little doubt that the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa will work for Britain's expulsion from the Olympics, though I do not think this will succeed." "Nevertheless, it's worrying for our competitors and I hope the rugby union officials can live with their consciences in this matter ' and aware of the damage they are doing to Rugby is not an Olympic sport and the tour would thus not break any olympic rules. But Fellows stressed he expected "aggressiveness and unpleasantness" towards Britain.

A DANGEROUS PHASE

The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan ushers in a phase of dangerous unrest in the area extending from Central Asia to the Middle East. The reactions to the invasion were immediate. The United States started with delaying its consideration of the SALT-II agreement, and embarked on a series of intensive consultations with its allies over what should be done. It is also considering establishing military bases in some parts of the area as a barrage against the encroaching red tide. The Western European governments bave shown extreme agitation against this unprecedented Soviet act, against a country which was still officially neutral. The Chinese have mobilized on both the Soviet and Afghan borders, with the Soviet move bound to push them into ever closer cooperation with the West. The Muslim states of the area have declared their resolve, based on religious as well as military and political considerations, not to allow the Soviet action to pass unchallenged. And, finally, the international money market, especially the gold market, has shown by its feverisb activity the fear gripping so many now of a wider conflict.

Are we then oo the threshold of a world war? The answer is: Probably not. The balance of terror still holds; with both sides realizing that there will be no real victor in a nuclear conflict, so that the ultimate weapons will only be used in the event of a direct nuclear threat to the population of either of the superpowers. No one, or so we must assume, will risk New York or Moscow over Kabul. But this does not mean that a long and complicated confrontation will not take place, in which wars will be waged by proxy, with the superpowers using them to settle older scores. The superpowers themselves will not themselves be involved, except indirectly, and through military posturing. In fact there are even views that the Soviet Union's crime will bring its own punishment: a long unwinnable war against a population versed as no other in irregular warfare, in a country especially suited topographically for it. All the West need do, accordingly, is stand back and watch the Soviets flounder in the mire. What, in all this, of the Arab world? As expected, and in contrast with the well defined stands of the adjacent Islamic countries, the United States, Western Europe and China, there is a veritable mosaic of Arab reactions, corresponding to the mosaic which is now Arab politics. These ranged from strong and immediate denunciations and calls for counteraction, to silent apprehension, to lukewarm "protest' and even, in some extreme cases, to support. On this issue as on others, and despite the proximity of the danger and the ties of history and religion with Afgbanistan, all was as expected so far as the need for a united Arab stand was concerned.

The internacional simuation, however, makes no allowances for such confusion. The vacuum it tends to produce constitutes ao invitation to others to cash in. And here the Israelis have not been tardy they have already offered bases and facilioes to the United States, and bave expressed eothusiasm to perform more direct services if and when the Western alliance requires.

Rebuilding American Intelligence

By Ray S. Cline

WASHINGTON -

The Iranian crisis illuminates tragically the low state 10 which the United States central intelligence system has been reduced. In the last five years, savage news media and congressional crincism as well as Carter-Mondale punitive restrictions on the Central Intelligence Agency have disastrously weakened the U.S. capability for conducting clandestine intelligence operations abroad.

While violence, anarchy, war and anti-Americanism have been spreading, the U.S. government has retired or dismissed nearly all of the experienced intelligence officers tempered in the conflicts of the 1950s and '60s. It bas dampened CIA morale, chilled energetic efforts to collect hard-to-get information, and cut Americans off from many valuable foreign intelligence sources. This incredible conduct has amounted to unilateral

Now in the Iran confrontation, Washington bas few opnous between surrender and sending in the Marines. There is no quick fix. The U.S. must begin to get its intelligence bouse in order before the next crisis and the one after that strike. It must rebuild what it has nearly destroyed. Four measures would

First, the name "CIA" has to go. The semi-fictional "CIA" of world beadlines is an international whipping boy on which the KGB and every dictator blame their difficulties. Regrettably, the name is a liability abroad.

Second, Washington must raise to new levels of excellence the analytical and informationprocessing elements of the several intelligence agencies in the CIA and the State Department and the Defense Department. They should be gatherec. under one budgetary and administrative roof and designated the United States Intelligence Community (USIC). The community would be an association of agencies in different government departments responsible for the quality and relevance of their work to a single managerial chief, the director of National Intelligence.

The director ought to be selected for a term of five years on the basis of character and intellect plus bona fide experience in both research scholarship and high-level policy management of intelligence operations. The community's aim should be totally objective, depolincized intelligence reporting. The USIC would be responsible for assigning tasks to intelligence collectors as well as for coordinating intelligence reporting, but it would be decentralized into competing centers of research and intelligence estimates. Nothing illegal or operational would ever be done by the analytical intelligence service.

Third, the intelligence collection egencies, which often must break foreign lews to get crucially needed information, should be set up as independent commands in the State and Defense Departments or in other cabinet departments that have overseas responsibility such as the Treasury, Commerce and Agriculture Departments. Clandestine: agent operations overseas, signal interception, and overbead and underwater technical reconnaissance should be carried out by strictly professional staffs who respond directly to requirements from the USIC. Their overseas personnel must have solid diplomatic cover.

Fourth, the major effort would be to create a new clandestine operations command responsible for estabilishing secret contacts abroad. The chief tity must remain hidden except from congressional intelligence committees. He and his staff would be assigned authentic State, Defense or other official cover - not the transparent "reserve officer" status that in the past has exposed many CIA employees abroad with the pitiful results we see in Iran.

The main clandestine information collection target ought to be early evidence of violent changes or fundamental shifts in political power in consequennal countries. In menacing situations, the U.S. should use its undercover assets in covert actions to belp friendly individuals and groups abroad with the hope that they might prevent seizures of political power by hostile or anarchic forces. Covert operations bave bolstered American policy in the past; after skillful rebuilding of overseas nets, they would be capable of doing so in the future.

Advance notification of covert-action plans should be restricted to the Senate and House intelligence committees, where tight security controls exist. The foolish law now requiring advance notification of 150 congressmen in eight committees, almost guaranteeing leaks, should be repealed .

Then the president in consultation with a small group of responsible congressmen could use the potential capacities for meeting Soviet, Cuban and other underground warriors oo equal terms rather than letting Americans abroad be sitting ducks as they were io Tebran (NYT)

Workers' control that Moscow detests

By Mark Frankland

ZAGREB -

The Russians dislike it intensely, The Chinese used to but are now curious about how it works. Visitors from the West bave been known to wonder if it might not be a miraculous Balkan cure for low

It is not surprising that the Yugoslav system of workers' self-management should provoke such extremes of interest and alarm for it is, quite simply, the most original, both politically and economically, in postwar Europe. Established in outline 30 years ago, and frequently remodeled, it is only now coming close to the vision of Edvard Kardelj, the philosopher of Tito's revolution, who died early last

The system is based on the Socialist idea that the working man should be able to control the whole product of his labor: not just his wages, but also that part which must go to economic and social investment and the conduct of government. It is also based, one should add, on the still unproven assumption that the average man wishes to exert such control.

The system has become very complicated. A manager of the textile factory in the Slovenian republic, embarking on an explanation, had the preoccupied look of some one working out a long equation in his bead.

Everything begins with Basic Organizations of Associated Labor. These represent logical divisions within an enterprise. His factory, employing 1,200 workers, was divided into four Basic Organizations; the larger two concerned with production, the smaller two looking after sales and social welfare.

The factory's plan and agreements on how income is to be split between wages and reinvestment are negotiated among the Basic Organizations. These agreements are of particular interest to the workers because they determine work norms, differentials and wages.

They are complicated documents, so in this factory smaller groups of about 30 persons are formed among those who share similar work interests. They elect a bead who is briefed on the agreement and he in turn briefs his members. A one-page summary of the agreement is also given to all workers.

Comments can be seat back to the drafters. The agreement is then submitted to the elected Workers' Council of each Basic Organization, where it again may be altered, and finally put to a referen-

But this is only the obvious part of selfmanagement. A great fuss is now being made about the oeed for the workers, considered the only creators of real wealth, to control the banking system and indeed all other organizations, including those of government, which use but do not create wealth, Banks are being reorganized to make them more controllable by the Basic Organizations.

Basic Organizations also elect delegates to government assemblies and to so-called self-managing communities of interest. These run services like bealth and education. They are not governmental, but bring together the providers of the services (doctors, teachers) with the people who use them.

The wbole system is laboriously derived from Marxist theory. Kardelj was schooled in Moscow in the 1930s and taught there for a time in a university for European national minorities, But Kardelj used his Marxist concepts to construct a system deeply shocking to his old Soviet mentors.

In spirit, at least, there are similarities to the Chinese Cultural Revolution: the belief that government is best when done by the people them-selves; the deep suspicion of bureaucrats and experts who, as a senior Yugoslav declared recently, "derive their social and economic power from the part of income which is alienated from those who create it."

But, unlike Mao's China, Yngoslavia is kept in touch with reality by the Basic Organizations' need to respect the laws of the market. A factory that fools around and loses money will close down.

I visited an enterprise outside Zagreb that bad just acquired a bankrupt factory. The workers there bad complained they were getting less than those in their new mother enterprise. But that was right. was told. After all, we saved them, didn't we? Of course the system works imperfectly, at nimes almost not at all.

There are strikes. Workers often have neither time nor skill to control their factories in a meani ful way. The expert who drafts the plan large decides the plan. The worker who sits on the bo of a bank is most likely to be a factory's finant director.

So bow real is it? "I say it is a veto system. scientist said, "though the politicians don't lik put that way." A girl just out of university thou that "the democratic machinery is there for per to use if they want to."

Neither mentioned the biggest question-mark the Communist Party and its "leading role". M van Djilas, once Tito's friend and colleague now his critic, tells visitors to his Belgrade flat th monolithic party makes self-management a he

Young Communists I talked to would disag True, neither they nor the great Kardeli can exp to the satisfaction of non-Marxist the contradic between democracy and the privileged role of party. But they say they are now trying to make party fit into self-management rather than ren an order-giver above it. They believe that treme ous and painful changes are in store, especially the party old guard.

Kardelj would want it that way. His memori: Ljubljana, capital of his native Slovenia. is or shadowed by two elegant new skyscrapers: headquarters of the Ljubljana Bank, assets $ billion, and the electronics enterprise Iskra, a s managing multinational.

Are such giants really controllable by their we ers? The Yugoslavs at least are going to have a

In a lead story Al Jazirah Saturday quoted Petromin Governor as saying that the Kingdom will set up the largest lubricants refinery in the world to achieve selfsufficiency in the country. Al Riyadh led with e report that said. agricultural projects worth SR1.5 billion were uoder implementation in different regions of the country. Al Medina and Okaz played as their lead story the U.N. Security Council's projected extraordinary meeting to debate the Afghanistan crisis as e result of Soviet Unioo's direct military intervention in that country.

The prominent stories that occupied the front pages of the newspapers included a report of student unrest in Egypt where a large police force was called it to put down disturbances at Cairo University. Saudi Arabia's participation in the meetings of the Afro-Arab Cooperation Committee, scheduled to be held in Tripoli next week, and the Kingdom's call for a U.N. meeting on Afghanistao were also highlighted on the front pages.

Al Medina frontpaged the London-based Al Hawadeth magazine's report that the Soviets were expanding their air aod naval base in the island of Socutra off South Yemen, while Al Rivadh had on its front pages that the Libyan army chief of staff held a meeting with the Palesninians in the Libyan army in an apparent attempt to remove them from Libyao-Palestinian differences.

Newspapers further condemned the Soviet military action in Afghanistan and urged Islamic states to extend unstinted moral, material and military support to Afghan Muslim revolutionaries to eneble them to crush the invaders and obliterate their destructive ideologies. In an editorial, Al Jazirah said the Soviet Union might now throw all its weight behind its attempt to swallow Afghanistan, and added that both Communism and Zionism were bostile movements working to dominate the ideologies and religions of mankind.

While the Soviets are apparently not in a mood to sit down and discuss the situation, the paper. held the view that mutual understanding at the diplomatic level coupled with positive and effective measures would make them understand the language of oegotiation and cause them to stage an uncoodinional withdrawal from Afghanistan.

While the Soviets are apparently not in a mood to sit down and discuss the sitaution, the paper beld the view that mutual understanding at the diplomatic level coupled with positive and effective measures would make them uoderstand the language of negotiation and cause them to stage an unconditional withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Highlighting the international reaction to Soviet aggression in Afghanistan, Al Medina said the most significant reaction came from the Islamic world. It referred to Saudi Arabia's clear stance announced during the latest meeting of the Council of Ministers and also to Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal's meeting with the ambassadors of Arab and

Islamic states accredited to the Kingdom. This meeting was beld to study the Afghanistan situatioo and to convey Saudi Arabia's views to other states in order to adopt a unified stance on the Soviet military action in Afghanis-

The paper vehemeotly denouoced the colonialist policy of both the Western and the Eastern blocs against the Islamic states and said it was highly regrettable that some countries kept quiet over the Afghanistan situation a matter that exposed their leaning toward the Communist bloc.

Writing oo the same subject, Al Bilad highlighted the Kingdom's concern for Afghanistan and said that it was the keet desire of Saudi Arabia that the Islamic states adopt a coordinated stand and remain unanimous in their views on all the events and issues. What happened in Afghanistan poses a big danger to the Islamic world, said the paper, adding that the Kingdom aimed at dispelling this danger.

It called upon the world community, including the Islamic world, to act in accordance with the U.N. Charter which rejects any intervention by a state in the domestic affairs of another. The paper hoped, however, that Saudi Arabia's efforts would lead to the adoption of such steps that will help the Afghans safeguard their national independence.

Al -Nadwa said in an editorial that some Western citcles have oow realized the importance of Pakistan which has apparently become a cornerstone in their planning in the wake of the Sovietexpansionist policy.

It referred to several offers of assistance to Pakistan which, it said, were not forthcoming earlier despite Pakistan's requests.

The paper voiced its opposition to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and supported any Islamic action taken to counter the Communist onslaught, It also endorsed Pakistan's call to discuss the Afghanistan situation and the dangers that it posed to the Islamic

The most recent of these coups (Dec. 27) involved about 15,000 Soviet troops airlifted three days before attacking the People's House, the htoadcasting station and other vital points in the capital. President Hafizullah Amin was captured and later executed along with several members of his family.

The new self-proclaimed president, Babrak Karmal, was brought into the country just before the coup. He is known as head of Parcham (Flug) Party which was abolished during the rule of the two former Presidents, Noor Muhammad Faraki and Amin.

There are no reports of the number of people killed during the recent coup but it is believed to be subtannial since Amin kept very close links with the army officers. He was in charge of recruiting the military in the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan which, along-side Parcham, staged the successful coup against former President Muhammad Daoud in That coup was a bloodbath, unlike the one staged by Daoud against the last Afghan king, Zahir Shah, in 1973. An estimated 3.000 people were killed in the Marxist coup of 1978 including 32 of Daoud's family. Purges of the followers of the old regime continued and spread later to the members of Parcham, Barbak himself was in. late 1978, sent out of the country as ambassador to Czechoslovakia before going underground when Amin toppled faraki last September, just three days after Taraki's return from a triumphant visit to Moscow on his way back from Havana where he attended the nonaligned conference. Amin was the Prime Minister under Faraki, but on September 14 a shoot-out erupted at the People's House, once known as the Royal Palace, and Taraki was killed. One of the stones told about the incident claims that Taraki invited Amin to the People's House to settle a dispute concerning the sacking by Amin of three army officers from the Cabinet loyal to the President. When Amin arrived with a few bodyguards, they were met with bullets.

Amin left the People's House and returned the same night with a force of loyal followers and in the battle that followed Taraki was killed, or captured and executed later, while the three officers and dissidents from the ruling party took refugee in the Soviet Embassy and were shipped later to one of the Eastern Europe countries thought to be Bulgaria or Czechoslovakia. The same three officers flew back to Kabul after the last coup and have been appointed ministers in Karmal's

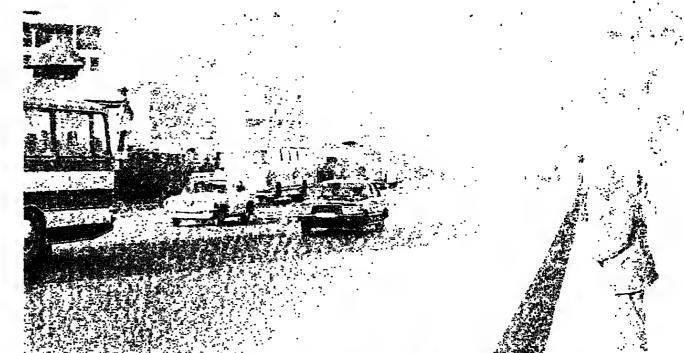

According to this story the former Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Busanov played a questionable role in the incident by personally asking Amin to come to the People's House for talks with Taraki. He was recalled to Moscow and replaced by the new Ambassador, l'abev Fikrat Ahmadianovich.

The shoot-out itself was ironic in many ways, because Amin was the only senior party member outside prison at a time when other leaders were about to be executed by President Daoud, and it was his swift action in ordering factions of the army against Daoud that saved the other party leaders including Taraki and Karmal.

There are several other interpretations of wbat happened on the night of September 14, and party and government officials avoid answering questions on this point. Amin, himself, said that he had met Taraki a day before but not on the same day and that shots were fired at him at Taraki's residence but killed instead Major Sayed Daoud Faron, acting president of the office of the Revolutionary Council, and one of those involved in staging the coup.

Another story told by sources close to both Western and Eastern circles in Kabul maintains that Taraki met alone with top Soviet leaders when he stopped over in Moscow. These sources believe that Amin's future was discussed at this meeting, and both sides agreed that he should be eliminated.

It is not clear at this stage how both side. agreed to carry out the plan, but the sources

indicated that Major Faron, and aide to Taraki, who kept Amin informed of what went on at the Presidential Palace, sent word to Amin of the forthcoming plan, and Amin stormed the Palace with his followers. Faraki was either killed or executed soon afterwards. During the shooting, I aron was killed by I araki's men when his role was unco-

Amin dismissed the recalling of the Soviet ambassador, Busanov, as a normal procedure since Busanov had been in Kabul for seven years, but sources confirmed the important role played by Busanov during the last few days of Taraki. One or two days after the shoot-out, several tanks were seen surrounding the Soviet Embassy, probably to thwart Amin's demand to hand over the three military officers and some dissident Party members who had taken refuge there.

The sources point out that Amin was a constant threat to Taraki. He had close links with the army and was involved in the recruiting of officers to the Party before the Revolution. His popular base was extremely limited. Taraki, on the other hand, had a relatively wider base at the party level, and from a fairly powerful tribe in the country.

After Taraki's death, the Soviets had no alternative but to cooperate with Amin, and the latter, realizing that no single person can rule for long, tried to widen the influence of the Party as a whole to avoid fallin trap of the personality cult with which Taraki had been accused.

Amin's complete takeover last September seems to have achieved better stability for the country, and the Soviets, having decided to come to terms with the new ruler, accepted

Amin showed more causion than his predecessor in dealing with several issues including Islam. "We view Islam with reverance." he told a visiting journalist, "But religion should not be used for political designs".

Still Amin conducted his affairs in a different way. When starting a speech he used the phrase, "In the name of Allah, the beneficient the merciful". He toned down his ideas of social reforms to appeare the Mullas. At the Government level, Amin tried to build the party, arranging courses for members, distributing membership cards to an estimated 50,000 people.

Afghans were not encouraged to think and the loudspeakers in the main square of Kabul broadcast lectures, the events of the party and Government, songs in Pashto, Farsi and Urdu, and occasionally parts of Beethoven's Seventh.

Amin lashed at the imperialists, Zionists and counter-revolutionaries exploiting illiterate Afghans.

"The enemies of our revolution never tell our people that our regime is a proletarian one believing in scientifie socialism. They tell them that anyone reciting the Kalima would get his tongue chopped off, or those who worship Gold will be executed, and that mosques are being demolished," he said. Just before his death. Still, mosques in Kabul have not beem demolished, nor have worshippers barred from praying, but the proposed constitution promises otherwise. Local newspapers carry party slogans. A favored one says, "The (proposed) constitution of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan lays the foundation for a full-fledged dictatorship of the proletariat."

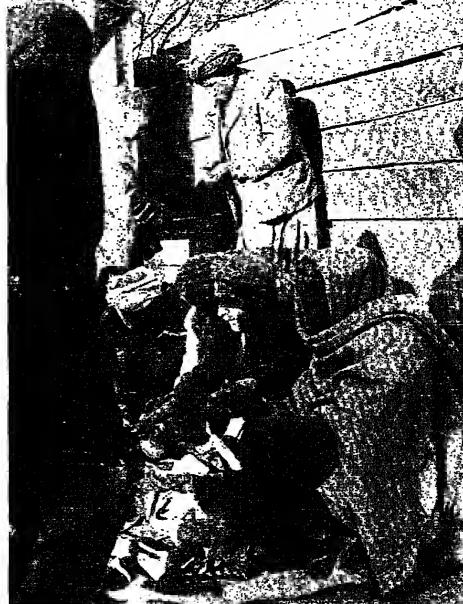

Considering the high rate of illitracy in Afghanistan, as well as the entrenched beliefs of the population, the task of Amin was colossal. Karmal's task is almost impossible.

To build the necessary support, Amin appealed to his countrymen. Popular committees were hurriedly formed, the latest of which wete the Afghan youth Organization. and the National Organization for the Defense of the Revolution. Feachers, students, peasants and Government employees were recruited to form unions.

When I met Amin at his residence he did not try to play down the significance of the dangers he faced both internally and externally. Some of the internal difficulties stemmed from the very nature of the tribal system in Afghanistan where tribesmen have more loyalty to their chief than to any government in Kabul, let alone a Communist government considered to be anti-Islam.

The change brought about military activities along the borders with Iran and Pakistan, and Amin himself forced to beef up his army both politically and militarily in the shortest period possible. The Soviets played a decisive role in the Amin government and in organizing his removal and execution.

British minister meets Kuwaiti ruler on energy

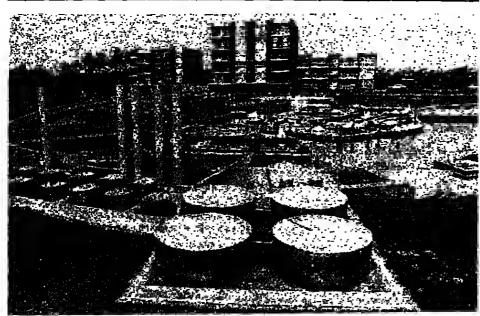

KUWAIT, Jan. 5 (AP) — British Energy Minister David Hnwell conferred Saturday with Kuwait's ruler, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and oil and Finance Minister Abdul Rahman Al-Angi.

Howell arrived here Friday on the first leg of a tour of Arab oil producing states which will also take him to Saudi Arabia, Iraq and the United Arab Emirales. The British minister told reporters at the airport that his country would raise the price of its north sea oil to $ 31 a barrel within the coming few days, following the raising of OPEC oil prices.

He said he would discuss with officials in the Arab oil producing states key oil issues. "We could also convey to officials in the four countries the British government's interest in holding dual oil deals with them, Howell said. Howell said he was not going to negotiate new crude oil deals with Kuwait "because this is not my responsbility." When asked about Britain's reaction to the recent oil price hikes by OPEC member states, Howell said that this has been beneficial to us as an oil producer but not as an oil consumer." Nevertheless, the minister said. Britain is keen on having stable oil prices. He said Britain expected to become self-sufficient in oil this year and that its proven oil reserves would ensure this self-sufficiency for 15 years, perhaps longer if oil exploration continued.

Howell denied his country was endeavoring to join OPEC in view of its increasing oil production. "We are an industrial country a former importer of oil with no surplus to export which is a prerequisite for OPEC membership, he said.

REFINERY: A close inspection of this oil refinery in Tuctonia, Dorset, England reveals that it and the tankers are all part of a miniature town designed to make spectators feel like giants. It is truly the smallest refinery in the world.

Hopes to end steel strike in U.K. dashed

LONDON, Jan. 5 (AP) - The two sides in the three-day-old strike against British Steel Corp. over demands for a 16 per cent pay raise failed to meet Friday as hopes for an early solution faded. This is the first nationwide steel strike in Britain since 1926.

There was a glimmer of hope Thursday when union leader Bill Sirs suggested productivity bonus money be put on the table now, and BSC chairman Sir Charles Villiers welcomed the plan, but there was no direct contact between the two sides Friday and no plans were announced for negotiations.

State-owned BSC has said it is broke, its debts are piling up at the rate of $2.2 million a day and it can only afford a 6 per cent wage

The 102,000 strikers of the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation and the Blast Furnacemen's union want 16 per cent more than their weekly basic salary of $ 168.75.

The strikers have set up picket lines at steel plants throughout the country, shutting down production. They have the support of coal miners, railwaymen and other unions in stopping importanon of steel, and bave appealed to transport unions overseas to block steel exports to Britain.

BSC supplies 54 per cent of the steel used in British industry. Its biggest customer is the financially ailing car giant British Leyland, which faces plant closures within weeks if the strike continues, Britain's top labor official, Len Murray, General secretary of the trades union congress reportedly intervened Friday night by meeting with BSC officials in London to urge the resumption of negotiations.

Sir Richard Marsh, former Labor cabinet minister and now chairman of the British fron and Steel Consumers' Council, urged a quick settlement, and said, "it cannot make any kind of sense to risk the jobs of some four million trade unionists employed in British steel-using industries."

Mexico hits at U.S. criticism

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 5 (AP) - Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, reacting to U.S. criticism of his country's latest oil price hike, said Friday that Mexico would not be tald what to do with its oil. The U.S. State Department called the price hike "unjustified" and the Mexican press gave front-page play to American displeasure over the increase.

"Nobody is going to tell us what to do with that which is ours just as we don't tell others what to do with that which is theirs. That's the golden rule." Lopez Portillo told leaders of an oil workers' union at the

Inflation seen as major factor in '80 world economic development

LONDON, Jan. 5 — In 1980 the great recession may not be so great after all, Instead of being deep and long, it may well turn out to be shallow and short.

This conclusion is based on the reluctance (and in some cases the inability) of governments to squeeze inflation out of the system, particularly at a time of very low growth. Instead, they are financing the rate of inflation. The level of demand seems to be remarkably resilient anyway. The recession is, for these two reasons likely to be a fairly short-lived affair.

The story starts in the United States. The grappling with inflation which we took to be the purpose of the Volcker measures last October, was no switch to monetarism, but amounted instead to a mere tactical change.

We allowed ourselves to believe that this was indeed the case. Thus, in November most people thought that the dollar had bottomed. that gold had been hit on the head by the huge rise in interest rates and that the major recesd complete the process

However, the Fed appears to have backed away from a tight policy. Credit is becoming easier. Interest rates are receding. Instead of recovering, the dollar is at a new low and gold

The fight against inflation has been smothered by new priorities: Iran, the need to increase defense expenditures and the overriding necessities of a presidential election. Disinflation is now well down the ladder.

This is now a worldwide problem. The average world inflation rate in 1980 is going to be in double figures. Of course, oil bas contributed a great deal to this situation. But it need not necessarily have worked out like this: The increase in oil price could have been accommodated. It isn't as though the oil producers bad suddenly increased the real price of oil beyond all reasonable bounds: They bave merely kept in line with other real prices. When these movements occurred, the consuming nations should have made room for the transfer of real wealth. Instead, they printed the necessary money and excused this by claiming that the oil producers were a greedy, grabbing lot who sbouldn't have put up the price oil of the first place.

The fact that the real price of oil was only recovering to what it should have been and that the West invariably charges the very top price for its technology, did not in any way mingate the anger and frustration.

The failure of countries to commit themselves to the fight against inflation is politics. President Carter is certainly not going to run

His opponents on the Republican side, although they will doubtless pay lip service to the necessity of cutting vast in Washington, will fall far sbort in their policy statements of putting real teeth into a program of disinflation.

Japan is in need of firm policies, but bas a relatively weak government so that the initiative in the fight against inflation is probably going to be left to the Bank of Japan. We all know the limitations of a one armed policy in the context of relative fiscal ease.

Even Mrs. Thatcher may not have it all her own way. Her problem is the same as that of other governments: People may approve the policy in theory, but they shrink from it in practice. Monetarism in the context of difficult economic conditions in the U.K. leaves a hollow feeling, as chunks of British industry slide into oblivion. One major consolarion is that Thatcher's praiseworthy and determined efforts to bring public expenditure back under control may be relatively successful. under control,

Even taking an opnimistic view, 12 months from now it is quite likely to be running at around 12 to 14 per cent. Of course, this will represent some degree of success,

Two feared dead in ship collision

BREMEN, West Germany, Jan. 5 (AP) -An Argentine freighter badly damaged in a North Sea collision was under tow following the rescue of 43 persons — including four women and five children — from the burning ship, German authorides have said.

Iwo stewards of the 10,076-ton Buenes Aires 2 were missing and presumed dead after the Thursday night collision with the Italian auto transporter Doria Riparia at the mouth of the Weser River, the officials said Friday.

The crew and passengers were rescued early Friday and brought to land after German salvage ships and freighters rushed to the accident scene in response to distress calls, the German Society for Sea Rescue

The impact tore a hole in the portside of the hull near the bridge, sparking a blaze that swept the stern section of the Argentine freighter, officials said.

The fire was finally extinguished Friday afternoon and the abandoned vessel was taken into tow for the trip to Bremerhaven for repairs, officials said.

Among its cargo were 200 tons of explosive chemicals which authorities did not further identify.

The bow of the 3,987-ton Italian vessel was crushed by the collision, which occurred in heavy fog off the West German coast.

Authorities said the Doria Riparia was moving under its own power to the Bremen docks for repairs. A tug was escorting the vessel which carried a load of automobiles.

It is difficult to execute an endplay successfully if you don't know when or how to put an opponent on lead to compel him to make a losing return. Actually, an endplay is a relatively simple gadget to use. Once declarer is able to visualize the end position he seeks, he rarely has difficulty executing the play.

Here is a typical setup. West ads a club and declarer sees that the only possible losers are a heart and a spade. A heart loser is inevitable, so all of South's energy should be devoted to trying to avoid the

But instead of relying entirely on a spade finesse by leading a low spade from dummy towards his K-J-5, it is the defenders to initiate spade suit.

Accordingly, club lead with the ace and cashes the A-K of trumps, the king of clubs and A-K of hearts. Having eliminated the side suits, South now exits with a heart.

South can feel certain of making the slam if West is the the defender who wins the third heart lead. West would have to return a spade or yield a ruff and discard, and It would be all over immediately in either case.

If East wins the third heart lead, South's position is less secure but he is still in very good shape. Thus, in the present case if East returns a low spade, South plays his five, while if East returns the ten of spades, South plays his The cootract likewise cceeds if East has the queen of spades and West the ten. South takes a spade finesse after West's ten forces dummy's ace. The only time the contract fails is when West has both the queen and ten of

Deadline in question

Guerrillas in Rhodesia rush to assembly areas

SALISBURY, Jan. 5, (R) — The midnight ceasefire deadline for Patriotic Front guerrillas appeared to have been unofficially extended Saturday as bush fighters made a last minute dash to neutral assembly points.

British officials said that by midnight at least 12,000 guerrillas had reported to ceasefire assembly points across Rhodesia and that the number was still rising as tailies from outlying areas came in.

Lord Soames, Britain's governor in Salisbury, bad said that guerrillas who had not reported by midnight would become "unlawful," though he has not said what action would be taken against them.

Butinformed sources said that as a result of the last minute rusb — at least 5,000 guerril-las checked in within the past 24 hours — the midnight deadline might not be final.

It was still not clear Saturday bow many guerrillas remain at large. Before they began the assembly exercise, British officials put the total oumber of guerrillas inside Rhodesia at hetween 16,000 and 18,000. The Patriooc Front claimed there were more than 31,000.

Guerrilla sources said some fighters were caching their arms in secret hiding places and melting back into the bush in order to safeguard their interests if the week-old ceasefire breaks down.

Some of the Rhodesian troops who have been fighting the guerrillas over the past seveo years were clearly hoping that the expiry of the ceasefire deadline would allow them to return to comhat the Patriotic Froot.
"As from midnight it's open season," ooe white soldier said Friday night.

Under the Rhodesian agreement reached in London last month, the guerrillas are required to report to 16 assembly areas and 23 rendezvous poiots, while Rhodesian gov-

At Delta One Rendezvous Point, several hundred, dusty, weary, but heavily armed guerrillas poured into the camp Friday, an event repeated throughout Rhodesia as the midnight deadling for reporting neared midnight deadline for reporting neared.

Comrade Marcos, one of the senior guerrilla commanders who presided over the steady stream of guerrillas who assembled here Friday, was still concerned, however. But the British mood was opomistic Friday night. Lord Soames, who had the power to order the bunting down of guerrillas who failed to report, cut short a trip to Bulawayo to return to the capital of Salisbury as the deadline neared.

All along, the British and guerrilla leaders bave predicted a frantic, last-minute rush to beat the deadline.

Defense Harold Brown and Chinese leaders next week will discuss Soviet intervencion in Afghanistan, an event which threatens to bave a deeply unsettling effect on the balance of power in Asia.

Arriving bere Saturday night on a nine-day visit to Peking, Wuhan and Shanghai. Brown will inspect Chinese air, ground and naval forces and confer with Premier Hua Guofeng, Senior Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping and leading military figures.

With him will be Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and pacific affairs, and staff members of the Nacional Security Council.

Besides Afghanistan, topics are expected to include Iran, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, the Korean peninsula and Australia-New Zealand. A potendally divisive issue - the Xinhua News Agency, the government's official voice reacted mildly Saturday to the Washington announcement. It recalled that the Chinese government bad previously announced its opposition to such sales.

U.S. officials say that Brown will ont be discussing any U.S. arms sales to China. There is speculation, however, that Brown will seek agreement in other areas, iocluding the training of Chinese officers, an exchange of military intelligence and the establishment of radar warning stations in Sinkiang to fill the gap left by the loss of stadons in Iran used to monitor the Soviet Union.

A few years back, a friend presented me with a book entitled Iwo Ihousand Insults, containing a collection of retorts and comments so broad and unrestricted as to pass into the realms of surrealism. I did not know whehter the friend wanted me to have an impression of his view of humanity as a whole through this gift, or. perish the thought, he had an even more personal message in mind. In any case, the book was soon lost — to one of those "friends" who insist on "borrowing" any book they see you reading, never to return

But a few days ago, in one of my cus-tomary browsings in bookshops here, l found an even better book — The Book of Insults, compiled by a lady called Nancy McPbee. This tome is definitely up market, not for it the lavatorial wit of the older book: The insults collected are those exchanged among the highest thinkers. artists and statesmen in history, representing a veritable treasure of cutting wil and hitter humor, proving that a sharp tonguc oeed not be also a dirty one. Here are the results of some preliminary excavations — more to follow, as we believe the art of insult has fallen on some very lean times indeed, with repetitive four letter words drowning all sense like ketchup smothering all other flavors. One of the earliest insults recorded is that directed by the Roman poet Martial to his Chloe: "I could do without your face, Chloe and without your neck, and your hands and your limbs, and, to save myself the trouble of mentiooing the points in detail, I could do without you altogether." Then there is King James the first's magisterial "Cnunterhlaste to Tobacco" part of which reads:" a custome loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, dangerous to the Lungs, and in the black stinking fumes thereof, neerest resembling the horrible Sigian smoke of the pit that is bottomlesse."

Then there is one of the greatest ripostes to an insult anywhere anytime, of the libertarian journalist John wrikes to the Earl of Sandwich, who bad addressed him baughóly: "Egad, sir, l do not know whether you will die on the gallows or nf the pox." To which the unabashed scribhler replied: " That will depend, my Lord, oo whether I embrace your principles or your mistress." Or, more recently and more gently, there was G. Bernard Shaw's insult to Winston Churchil, to whom he had sent two theatre tickets for the premier of a Sbaw play; accompanying the gift with a note: "Bring a friend - if you bave one." To which the old bulldog replied that he was sorry to be too busy to attend the first night, but would gladly go the second performance... "if there is one.

Belfast man murdered Northern Ireland deaths hit 2,000

BELFAST, Jan. 5 (AP) — A macabre milestone was set Friday when the beaten body of a young man in west Belfast became the 2,000th death in ten years of bloodshed in Northern Ireland...

The youth who had been beaten around the head, was not named but police said he was a 21-year-old Roman Catholic who was so badly beaten he could only be identified from tattoes. His body was discovered by police in a derelict house after a passing motorist said he heard moans coming from inside and raised the alarm. Meanwhile, bombers struck Belfast for the first time this year. Police said a number of premises in Donegall St. had been hit and two buildings were set aftre. No casualties were immediately reported but an officer of the Royal Ulster Constabulary was slightly injured in a shooting locident in the Antrim

Road district.

Police informants said they believed the bombs had been planted by the IRA in the first attack on the city this year. The death toll of 2,000 includes two British paratroopers killed by their own men last week when they walked into their own anti-IRA ambush near the border with the Irish Republic.

The official tally kept by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the province police force, does not include the two and now stands at 1,998. Compared to the number of casualnes in declared wars, the Northern Ireland toll is small. But on a proportional basis, it is equivalent to 276,000 dead in the United States twice the number of Americans killed in the Korean and Vietnam wars combined.

In the tight-knit communities of Northern Ireland, which has a population of 1.5 million, the killings over the last ten years have tonched just about every family.

and coach Crammer must be especially worried by the form of international striker Issa Hamdan who has netted only once this year. Last year's champion, Hilal, after defeating Ittifaq and drawing 3-3 with Ittihad in Jeddah, was another side needing a win to get back along with Nasr and Irtihad at the top of the league. The blue-shirted Riyadh side never looked like gaining the two points in a

Friday. In a poor match neither side looked capable of stringing more than two passes together without giving the ball to the opposition and the quietest men on the field were the two goalkeepers. Nahda did at least manage to play some neat football in bringing the hall out of defense but could not provide the inspiration necessary to make any scoring opportunioes. Nahda's efforts were confined to opomisoc long-range sbots which keeper

Ibrahim Yousif dealt with ease. Hilal's play was even more devoid of creaove ability, and its attacking ventures consisted of sporadic runs by Rivelino, Najib Imam and Sultan ibn Nassib that foundered against a packed Nahda defense.

Hilal bas nine points two behind the leaders, and one ahead of Ahli, last year's Kings Cup winner. Ahli must be considered fortunate to be only three points behind the leaders and soll in with a chance of the title. The fluid consistency which took Didi's side to three successive cup triumphs and the league title in 1978 has all but deserted the Jeddah team. Narrow victories over Hilal and Ohod seemed to put Ahli back on the winning trail, but the side's inconsistency showed up when it lost 1-0 to Ittifaq in Dammam, and on Thursday could only draw 0-0 with Wehda in a untidy game in Jeddah.

In the other match played over the weekend lttifaq drew 0-0 with Kadasia in a local derby in Dammam.

These results leave the league poised in an interesting position. Nasr, after looking so accomplished for most of the season, must bave had its confidence shattered by the defeat by Ohod and will have to raise its game against draw experts Nahda this week if it is to get back on the winning track. Ittihad, joint leader with Nasr, but with serious goal-scoring problems, faces Mecca's Wehda in Jeddah, and could have difficulty bearing a side which has not conceded a goal since losing 5-0 to Nasr in early November.

Third-placed Hilai should beat Shebab in Riyadb, but Ahli has to make the trip to Dammam to play Kadasia in a match Didi's team cannot afford to lose. The fifth match sees Ohod, fresh from its victory over Nasr, take on fellow relegation battlers Ittifaq in Medina.

With the big derby matches between Hilal and Nasr in Riyadh and Ahli and Ittihad in Jeddah due to be played on January 17 and 18, none of the top teams can risk dropping points in this weekend's matches if their league challenges are to be maintained.
